[The above list of Defoe's writings does not take account of nearly 300 books and pamphlets which have been ascribed to him at various times. Many of these are almost as much entitled to be received into the accredited list as are most of the items that have been accepted since the time of Chalmers and Wilson, but, for one reason or another, it has seemed best to omit enumerating them here.]

(5) LETTERS AND MEMORANDA

[Defoe's Letters and Memoranda in print number about 230 and are chiefly to be found in vols iv and v (1897, 1899) of the Fifteenth Report of the Historical MSS Commission, MSS of the Duke of Portland (Harley Letters and Papers). See EHR xxii, 1907, for an unpubd political paper by Daniel Defoe, Maxims and Instructions for Ministers of

State (May and June, 1704) Sporadic letters are to be found in other reports of the Commission, in N & Q, and in the chief biographies, notably Wright's Several unpubd letters are privately owned The letters to Harley, however, contained in the Portland MSS give the best idea of Defoe as a correspondent]

III MINOR FICTION AND TRANSLATIONS

[The following is a selective list drawn from some 3500 titles. A liberal interpretation has been given to the term 'fiction', so that all the main types which contributed to the novel of the close of the period might be included. Trans from English into French, German, etc have not been noted, partly because of the incompleteness of the information available. Another deviation from the practice obtaining in other sections of the Bibliography has been the grouping of entries by the year of publication and not by authors. It was felt that the utility of a scheme showing the year-by-year development outweighed the claims of consistency. (The index will be found to provide references to all the scattered items by any single author.) The relevant critical and biographical matter has been concentrated in the section of General Studies, pp 488-90 above.]

IV CHILDREN'S BOOKS

[This section covers only books originally meant to be read, or in fact habitually read, by young persons under the age of (approximately) 15, in their leisure hours, for enjoyment It excludes (i) books for school or educational use, produced as such (see under Education, pp 125-30 above), (ii)

rhymed or illustrated alphabets, unless contained in works of more general scope (see e.g., under T W below), (iii) didactic or religious works, except a few typical works of the period 1660-1720, in which monitory intention expressed itself as specially providing righteous enjoyment

Certain types of work, for various reasons, cannot be subject to exact bibliography They are.

I 'Annexed' books, i.e. books written for adults which became almost immediately books widely read by children, either as a whole or in shortened versions The chief of these are

Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress 1678 (see p 491 above) Passed early into chapbook versions and so into the hands of children Many edns for the young ever since

Swift's Gulliver's Travels 1726 (see p 589 below)

These two had the same fate as The Pilgrim's Progress

[Peter Longueville's] The Hermit or, the Adventures of Philip Quarll 1727 (see p 589 above)

II Fairy Tales A majority of these, in printed form, were in the first instance trns (see below, Translations, under Perrault, Leprince de Beaumont, Aulnoy) It is impossible to say at what date others, more nearly indigenous, first appeared in print and were likely to be in the hands of children See works cited in Bibliography below The first traced edns which can be conjecturally dated of Jack the Giant Killer and Jack and the Beanstalk are Newcastle, 1711, and (probably a late edn) London, 1820, respectively The origin of such tales is outside the scope of bibliography, though the Proceedings of the Folk-Lore Society and other bodies occasionally record printed versions See also below, Chapbooks

III Romances The Romances of the Middle Ages and later (see vol 1, pp 128-60) decayed by steps not now to be traced into popular and chapbook versions, available to and used by children, which cannot be attrib to any definite author or dated See below, Chapbooks

IV. Fables Versions of 'Aesop' and other fabulists were put to two main uses—education (for teaching Greek, Latin and French), and social decoration Through these channels they became common reading for children, in selections, adaptations, and 'complete' texts The versions most frequently reprinted for juvenile use during this period were John Ogilby's (1651, see vol I, p 799), Sir Roger L'Estrange's (1692, see p 569 below), Samuel Croxall's (1722, see p 759 below), and Robert Dodsley's (1771, adapted from Croxall's, 1784, with woodcuts by Thomas and John Bewick [many rpts, known familiarly as Bewick's Aesop or Bewick's Fables] See p 487 above) See also below, Bibliography and History, and Chapbooks.

V Nursery Rhymes Origin and first appearance uncertain (see works cited in Bibliography and History, below) The first English collections at present known are:

Tommy Thumb's Pretty Song Book [1744? Vol II only known, in unique copy, BM]

The Top Book of All London and Salisbury, 1760

Gammer Gurton's Garland or, The Nursery Parnassus Stockport, [1760?]

Mother Goose's Melody or, Sonnets for the Cradle [1780? No copy known, but probably rptd at Worcester, Massachusetts, within a year or two], 1791 [No evidence for an alleged U S A edn of 1719 See also W H Whitmore, The Original Mother Goose's Melody, Boston, 1892 (with facs U S A edn of 1785)]

Many chapbook edns, n d, appeared from c 1790 onwards, varying in contents and title, and often containing a single long rhyme (e g Cock Robin) with an illustration on every page Occasional appearances and quotations show existence of the rhymes long before general collection

VI Chapbooks These often piratical productions not merely included any new popular work of the day, but preserved many traditional tales and rhymes not otherwise recorded in print They were seldom dated, and the old blocks were used over and over again, in different circumstances It is impossible to give a strict bibliography of them So far as children are concerned, they began about 1700 and died out about 1840, towards the end of that period, the more responsible publishers copied the chapbook format to some extent, but provided new type, new blocks and good paper The chief works regularly produced in chapbook form were Bevis of Southampton, The Children (or Babes) in the Wood, Cock Robin, Cries of London, Cries of York, Robinson Crusoe, Eastern Tales (Arabian Nights and similar stories), Fables, Fairy Tales (Perrault, etc, usually single tales, not collections); John Galpin, Guy of Warwick, Tom Hickathrift, The House that Jack Built, Mother Hubbard, Jack the Giant-Killer, Jack and Jill, Nursery Rhymes of all kinds, under various titles, Adventures of Philip Quarll, Riddle-books, The Seven Champions of Christendom, Tom Thumb, Valentine and Orson, Dr Watts's poems, under various titles, Sir Richard Whittington See also works cited in Bibliography and History below, and F J H Darton, Children's Books in England, 1932, ch v, for summary]

 ed G B Hill, Oxford, 1888 [A set of uncorrected proof-sheets of lines 73-92 and 103-400 of the 1st edn of the poem was discovered by B Dobell in 1902 and reproduced by him in the same year in A Prospect of Society, being the earliest form of The Traveller; it is now in the BM The most striking peculiarity of these sheets—the fact that the text of the poem, instead of running regularly forward from the beginning, starts abruptly with ll 353-4 and proceeds backwards in a series of sections, ranging in length from 28 to 42 lines—has usually been explained as the result of Goldsmith's carelessness in arranging the sheets of his manuscript. See Sir A T Quiller-Couch, Daily News, 31 March 1902 (rptd in From a Cornish Window, 1906), and G England, Library, III, 1902. A more likely hypothesis is that the disarrangement of the type was due to an oversight in make-up.]

[Ptd in Miscellaneous Works, ed Prior, 1837, as Preface and Introduction to the History of the Seven Years' War Written c 1760-1 The manuscript is now in Huntington Lib See J W Oliver, TLS 18 May 1922]

(5) SPURIOUS, DOUBTFUL, AND LOST WORKS

Appeal for Christopher Smart [1764? Mentioned by Percy in a letter to Malone, 17 Oct 1786 See K C Balderston, The History and Sources of Percy's Memoir of Goldsmith, pp 27-8 The MS was never ptd, and is now lost]

The Christian's Magazine, or a Treasury of Divine Knowledge 1760-7 [See J Prior, Life, vol I, pp 409-13, 479-80, 488, vol II, p 102, R S Crane, New Essays, pp 140-1, R W Seitz, MP xxvi, 1929, pp 308-5]

A Description of Millenium Hall, and the Country adjacent By a Gentleman on his Travels 1762 (March 1763), 1764, 1767, 1778 [Prior in 1837 recorded a tradition that this work had been revised by Goldsmith (Life, vol I, pp 468-9), but he knew of no evidence The authors were Lady Barbara Montagu and Sarah Scott]

The Fair Thief [The poem was attrib to Goldsmith in A Collection of Poems, Mostly Original, by Several Hands, Dublin, 1789 It had first appeared, however, in GM for Dec 1746 See M H Addington, N & Q 24 June 1933]

The Gentleman's Journal, or Weekly Register of News, Politics, Literature, and Amusement Nos I-II(?), 19, 26 Nov 1768 [According to Cooke, Goldsmith was one of the contributors to this short-lived periodical (European Mag. xxiv, 1793, p 171) No set of the numbers seems to be known]

The History of Little Goody Two-Shoes 1765 (advertised as in press 1 Jan.), 1766 (3rd edn), 1772, etc, ed C Welsh, 1881 [An attribution apparently first suggested by William Godwin (see Prior, Life, vol II, pp 100-1) Goldsmith may possibly have written the Introduction, which expresses a social philosophy similar to that found in The Traveller and in certain of the essays, but there are no positive reasons for supposing that he had anything to do with the story proper For discussions of this and of other children's books ptd by Newbery which have been ascribed to Goldsmith on equally inconclusive grounds, see N & Q 20 July 1861, 16 Dec 1871, 6 Jan 1872, 25 March 1893, 24 Sept 1904, Athenaeum,

- 25 March, 1871, C Welsh, A Bookseller of the Last Century, 1885, and his article on Goldsmith and Mother Goose in Bibliographer, I, 1902, Gibbs, Works, vol v, pp 356 note, 405-8]
- The History of Mecklenburgh, from the First Settlement of the Vandals in that Country, to the Present Time 1762 (2 issues) [Written by Sarah Scott Goldsmith may have revised it for press, it is mentioned among his writings in Westminster Mag April 1774, p 167 See Prior, Life, vol I, pp 388-9]
- The History of Pamela, or, Virtue rewarded Abridged from the Works of Samuel Richardson 1769, ed A E Newton, Berwyn, Pa., 1929 [A purely conjectural attribution]
- Letter of the late Dr Goldsmith, when about Twenty five Years old, to a young Gentleman whom he had for a short Time instructed in different Branches of Learning Annual Register (Otridge's edn), XLIII, 1802 [Rptd in Works, ed Gibbs, vol I, pp 473-7 Provenance unknown The letter itself, which seems to have been designed as the first of a series, does not suggest Goldsmith in either its substance or style]
- The Life of Christ [This work, for which Goldsmith acknowledged the receipt of 10 guineas on 11 Oct 1763 was advertised by Newbery in Dec 1764, along with An History of the Lives of the Primitive Fathers of the Church (for which see Sect (4) above) It was also listed among their pms by Carnan and Newbery in 1769 and again in 1774 No copy, however, seems to be known See R W Seitz, MP xxvi, 1929, pp 296-9]
- The Lilliputian Magazine or the Young Gentleman & Lady's Golden Library n d [Attrib to Goldsmith in the BM Catalogue and elsewhere. It was, however, pbd in 1752]
- Lines attributed to Dr Goldsmith, inserted in the Morning Chronicle of April 3, 1800 [Two quatrains were ptd under this heading in several early 19th-century edns of Goldsmith's Poetical Works, including that of Mitford in 1831 They have been rejected by later editors, and it is doubtful, indeed, whether the correspondent who inserted them in the Morning Chronicle intended to ascribe them to Goldsmith]
- The Literary Magazine [Seven articles or series of articles pbd in this periodical between Dec 1757 and July 1758 have been ascribed to Goldsmith—four of them by Prior in 1837 (Life, vol I, pp 233-6), the others by Gibbs in 1885 (Works, vol III, pp. 450-7; vol IV, pp 417-62) See, how-
- ever, R W Seitz, Goldsmith and the Literary Magazine, RES v, 1929]
- The Martial Review or, A General History of the Late Wars 1763 (Sept) [Based on a series of articles ptd in the Oxford Gazette and Reading Mercury between 25 Jan 1762 and 2 Jan 1764 If Goldsmith had any share in the book it probably extended only to the Preface See Prior, Life, vol I, pp 477-8]
- Memoirs of my Lady B 1761 (Jan) [According to an undated receipt Goldsmith was paid 10 guineas by Ralph Griffiths for translating this work Its publication was announced in GM Jan 1761, but no copy is known See Prior, Life, vol I, p 279, Balderston, Census, pp 26-7, Collected Letters, p 51 note]
- Memorial to Lord Bute [1762? Mentioned by Percy in a letter to Malone, 17 Oct 1786 See Balderston, The History and Sources of Percy's Memoir of Goldsmith, p 27 Lost]
- Museum rusticum et commerciale 1763-8 [Prior's conjecture (Life, vol II, p 103) that Goldsmith wrote for this periodical seems to have rested merely on the circumstances that Newbery was one of its publishers and that it served as an organ for the Society of Arts, of which Goldsmith became a member on 17 Nov 1762 None of the contributions can be ascribed to him with any assurance]
- A New History of England by Question and Answer [1761?] (11th edn) [The '79 Leaves of the History of England' mentioned in a Newbery memorandum of 1764 or 1765 were identified by Prior with an addn of five sheets made in the 11th edn of this work and dealing with the reign of George II (Life, vol I, p 402) See, however, R W Seitz, MP xxviii, 1931, p 335]
- The Newtonian System of Philosophy 1761 [Listed as by Goldsmith in An Exhibition in the Yale University Library of the Works of Oliver Goldsmith, New Haven, 1928]
- On the Several Conditions of Life Reformer, No 4, Dublin, 1748 [A poem of 18 lines, conjectured to be Goldsmith's by A P I Samuels, The Early Life, Correspondence and Writings of Edmund Burke, Cambridge, 1923, pp 170, 308]
- A Poetical Dictionary, or, the Beauties of the English Poets, alphabetically displayed 4 vols 1761 [Attrib to Goldsmith by James Crossley, N & Q 5 June 1852 The compiler was really Samuel Derrick.]
- Prospectus for An Universal Dictionary of Arts and Sciences [1773? See Westminster Mag April 1774, p 167, and Percy's Life,

- 1801, pp 112-13 Possibly never ptd, in any case no copy is known]
- Select Fables of Æsop and Others To which are prefixed the Life of Æsop, and an Essay upon Fable A new edition improved Newcastle, 1784 [The Essay upon Fable, the poetical 'applications,' and the Fables in Verse are ascribed to Goldsmith by Edwin Pearson in his Select Fables of Æsop and Others, [1871], Preface His reasons do not appear]
- A Spelling Dictionary of the English Language, on a New Plan The Eleventh Edition To which is prefixed, A Compendious English Grammar, with a concise Historical Account of the Language 1766 [In Sotheby & Co's catalogue of the third portion of the Thorn-Drury Lib (Nov 1931) this work is identified with the 'short English grammar' mentioned in a Newbery memorandum of 28 Dec 1766 The Compendious English Grammar, however, had been ptd with A Spelling Dictionary from at least the 5th edn of that work, 1755]
- The Triumph of Benevolence, or, the History of Francis Wills 2 vols 1772, Berlin, 1786, Uppsala, 1799, tr French (as Histoire de François Wills, ou le Triomphe de la Bienfaisance, par l'auteur du Ministre de Wakefield), Amsterdam, 1773, Neuchâtel, 1774 [On this work see Gibbs, Works, vol i, pp 238-40, B Neuenendorff, Goldsmiths verlorener Roman, Ang xxxii, 1909, A L Sells, RES. xi, 1935.]
- Verses Written by the Late Dr Goldsmith Addressed to a Friend [68 lines, beginning 'O Firm in virtue, as of soul sincere' Ptd by Walter Jerrold, Bookman (New York), xi, 1914, pp 253-4, from a scrapbook clipping of an unidentified periodical of the late 18th century The verses express a number of Goldsmith's characteristic ideas, and may be authentic They had, however, been rejected by Prior in his Life, 1837.]
- Vida's Game of Chess translated [Attrib to Goldsmith by Forster (see Life and Times, vol ii, 1877, pp. 234-42) and first ptd by Cunningham in his edn of the Works, 1854, from the unique manuscript then in the possession of Bolton Corney The sole ground for the ascription was the belief that the manuscript was in Goldsmith's hand. Since, however, it is now clear that this belief was mistaken, and that the Game of Chess is written in a hand that bears only the most superficial resemblance to Goldsmith's, there can be no longer any reason for retaining the poem in the canon]

II PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS

DIALOGUE PAPERS, THE PERIODICAL
ESSAY, MAGAZINES AND REVIEWS, AND NEWSPAPERS

1 DIALOGUE PAPERS, ETC (1676-1718)

[The papers in the present section fall into four main groups (a) Allegorical serials on the model of the picaresque novel, but with a veiled political application, these are the earliest, and are represented by Poor Robin's Memoirs, and News from the Land of Chivalry among others (b) The dialogue papers proper, the first of these was Heracitus Ridens, and the most famous Sir Roger L'Estrange's Observer They are nearly always exclusively political, and they lasted until the second decade of the eighteenth century (c) The papers devoted mainly to answering the queries of correspondents, of which The Athenian Mercury was the most outstanding example Their contents were usually not political (d) Serial discourses on politics or manners, as Defoe's Review and the semi-literate satires of Tom Brown, Ned Ward, and John Dunton Many of these might be called essays, and it is hardly practicable to draw any precise line, between what was an essay and what was not, before the year 1709, when The Tatler established a model which was quickly and widely imitated The entries in this list, therefore, include all papers mainly devoted to comment rather than news which have been noted up to that year Those preceded by an asterisk have not been examined personally by the compiler]

2. THE PERIODICAL ESSAY

[It has been thought wise to exclude from this handlist a number of periodicals which are often referred to as essays On the one hand are such periodicals as Tutchin's Observator of 1702-12 and Charles Leslie's Rehearsal of 1704-9, which followed a tradition older than that of the essay in being made up almost exclusively of dialogue and are listed in the preceding section On the other hand, periodicals devoted to reviews of books, such as the History of the Works of the Learned, 1699-1711, the Monthly Review of 1749 ff, or the Analytical Review of 1788 ff, were filled, in the 18th century, rather with excerpts and summaries than with the well-developed critical essays to be found in the Edinburgh Review and others of the 19th century It must be remembered also that most magazines or miscellanies, such as the Gentleman's Magazine, contained, before the last quarter of the 18th century, few original essay contributions Their 'weekly essays' were appropriated from numerous weekly journals Almost no serial essays, as original contributions, are found in the magazines before 1760

A dagger (†) has been used to designate journals which contained notable serial essays, but were not primarily essay periodicals Many newspapers, especially, between 1700 and 1750, were vehicles for essays of manners as well as politics The most important of these (not listed in the following handlist) are the Daily Courant, 1702-35 (?), Weekly Journal, or, British Gazetteer (Read's), 1715-61, Original Weekly Journal (Applebee's), 1715 (?)-1736 (?), Weekly Journal, or, Saturday's Post (later 'Mist's' and 'Fog's'), 1716-37, London Journal, 1719-44, by John Trenchard, etc, Weekly Register, or, Universal Journal, 1730-4 (?), Daily Gazetteer, 1735-48, Westminster Journal, or New Weekly Miscellany, 1741-1808, and Old England; or, the Constitutional Journal, 1743-53]

3 MAGAZINES AND REVIEWS

Bibliographies, Histories and Special Studies
 General Works, Biographies, Indexes and Accounts of Individual Magazines
Early Magazines. Literary and Scientific News (1679-1737), Political Summaries (1687-1730), Literary Miscellanies (1692-1723)
London Magazines (1731-1800)
Annals (1702-1800)
Other Magazines Provincial Magazines (1721-1800), Welsh Magazines (1735-1800), Scottish Magazines (1739-1800), Irish Magazines (1734-1800), Foreign Magazines (1717-1800)

[The eighteenth-century magazine properly comprehended four elements (a) Essays, (b) Poetry, (c) Announcement and Criticism of new books, and (d) Summary of news, with a list of births, deaths, bankrupts and prices. The material for all these was avowedly excerpted or abridged from newspapers or from other magazines. In Jan 1731 The Gentleman's Magazine was begun as a monthly summary of the most important contents of the daily and weekly papers, and it is the first periodical entirely to conform to the description of a magazine just set out. Nevertheless some of its separate ingredients have an older pedigree, and these have been classified in sections B (1), (2), (3) as Literary and Scientific News, Political Summaries, and Literary Miscellanies. This classification has not been pursued beyond 1731, because, although periodicals of all the earlier types continue to appear, they tend to approximate to the form established by The Gentleman's Magazine. In the same way Reviews, though generally of a more serious content, are not sufficiently distinct in form to be satisfactorily segregated in a separate section.

The magazine was normally issued monthly and in octavo, as any variation of this plan might have rendered it liable to payment of the Stamp Duty. Stamped publications have been excluded from this list, although a few are included (e.g. The Publick Register, 1741, and The Weekly Amusement, 1763-7, a weekly literary miscellany with a fortnightly supplement of news) which seem to have eluded the duty by expedients of a doubtful legality.

The distinction between a magazine and a newspaper is more difficult to draw in the provinces. The word was occasionally used as the title of a newspaper. Wheeler's Manchester Magazine is nothing more than a weekly journal, and is consequently listed below, p. 725. The attempt to evade the Stamp Duty was more persistent outside London. The Edinburgh Eighth Day Magazine is a case in point, while The Birmingham Register and The Coventry Museum, which were really the same magazine, were issued from their respective towns on alternate weeks to the same subscribers solely to avoid the duty payable by a weekly newspaper. The difficulty of classification is increased by the fact that most provincial newspapers are largely composed of excerpts from London papers. Although the exclusion of stamped periodicals rules out provincial weekly miscellanies containing news, it admits those of purely literary content and those published less often than once a week.]

B EARLY MAGAZINES

[In this and the following sections all entries not preceded by an asterisk are based on (a) personal examination, (b) photographic facsimiles, or (c) list given above, p 669 section (c). Although entries have been taken from these printed lists, the files from which they derive are accessible, and their accuracy can be verified. The entries preceded by an asterisk depend upon authorities which do not give any recent or permanently accessible location, and, in some cases, on the dubious expedient of reckoning backward from extant issues.]

Ed = edited by This has been sparingly used and only when there is evidence that the person specified had some constant control of the contents of the magazine Contributors, however extensive, have not been mentioned. Ptd = printed by This has only been used to distinguish magazines of similar title, or where the printer is believed to have had a considerable share in editing the magazine. Pbd = published by This again has only been used to distinguish magazines of similar title, or to indicate that the publisher took an active interest in the contents of the magazine.

In the eighteenth century magazines were normally issued on the first day of the month following the month which is printed on them; thus the number for June would usually be issued on July 1. This fact is of particular importance in using the lists of Nichols and Tupperley who constantly give the date of issue rather than that printed on the magazine itself. In this list the dates given are those printed on the magazines and not those of issue, in a few important cases the actual date of issue has been added in square brackets. All periodicals were issued monthly, unless otherwise stated.]

(5) FOREIGN MAGAZINES

[This section only includes magazines and reviews which are written in English or specifically devoted to English works The review in eighteenth-century England was largely derived from Pierre Bayle's Nouvelles de la Republique de Lettres, Hague, 1684-1718, and its imitations pbd in French by Huguenot refugees in Holland These periodicals fill the gap between the early pbns of literary news and The Monthly Review and The Critical Review Their influence in England may be gauged from so precise an imitation as Gibbon's Mémoires Littéraires de la Grande Bretagne]

Bibliothèque Angloise, Ou, Histoire Litteraire de la Grande Bretagne 1717-1728 [Amsterdam Ed Michel de la Roche (1717-20), Armand Boislebeau de la Chappelle (1720-8)]

4 THE NEWSPAPER

[As the newspaper did not develop as a clearly distinct style until 1695, no attempt has been made to separate it from other periodicals before that date, except to exclude transactions of societies and reviews of learned works. Thereafter a newspaper is understood to be a periodical issued once a week or oftener, printed in a size larger than octavo, and including news as part of its normal content.]

(4) MANUSCRIPT NEWS-LETTERS

[Regular services of professional news-letters considerably antedate 1660, but the restrictions on the printed newspaper after the Restoration greatly extended their circulation. Before the lapsing of the Licensing Act in 1695, they supplied gentlemen in the country, once, twice or three times a week, and coffee houses in London, at least during the Popish Plot, as often as two or three times a day. After 1695 they became the usual source for the political gossip of the provincial papers. As professional news-letters were never signed, their precise identification in calendars and catalogues is usually impossible. Considerable numbers have survived, particularly at the Public Record Office.]

B LONDON NEWSPAPERS

[In this and the following sections all entries not preceded by an asterisk are based on (a) personal examination, (b) photographic facsimiles, or (c) lists given in the preceding subsection. Although some entries have been taken from these lists, the files from which they derive are accessible, and their accuracy can be verified. Those entries preceded by an asterisk or enclosed within square brackets depend upon authorities which do not give any recent accessible location, and, in some cases, on the dubious expedient of reckoning backward from extant issues.]

The identification of one paper with another of a different, or even with the same title, is particularly hazardous in the frequent absence of continuous files. Although 'continued as' has been qualified in doubtful cases, the phrase should be read with caution throughout.

Ed. = Edited by. This has only been used when there is definite evidence, and where the editor was not the printer. Ptd = Printed by. In provincial papers, at any rate of the earlier 18th century, this can nearly always be taken as 'edited by'. It has only been used in other sections, either to distinguish papers of the same name produced by different printers, or when the printer is known to have taken an active interest in the contents of the paper. Pbd = Published by. This again has not been used except to distinguish papers of the same name, or when the publisher was actively interested in the contents of the paper. 'Conducted by' has occasionally been used to indicate a proprietor who had a controlling voice in the policy of the paper without being its regular editor, printer or publisher.

All dates have been given in the new style, whether they are so dated in the original or not. All dates refer to the actual days of issue. When a paper is dated from one day to another, the second and later date, which is presumably the day on which it was issued, has alone been given.]

(4) EVENING PAPERS

[It is probable that most of the thrice-weekly papers from 1695 at any rate for a few years were pbd in the evening so that they could include the latest news, and appear in time to catch the country posts, which left London three times a week. All the papers listed in this section were pbd three times a week, unless otherwise specified.]

(5) WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS AND JOURNALS

[Nearly all newspapers were weekly before the lapsing of the Licensing Act in 1695. From this date the weekly newspaper does not appear to have had much success until after the Stamp Act of 1712. This opened the way for the unstamped three-leaf journals which had an advantage in price over other papers. A Journal contains an essay prominently displayed, with news to fill up the paper, most prominent political organs were of this type in the second quarter of the 18th century. The influence of the magazine is seen in several weekly newspapers from 1740 onwards, but where these devote substantial space to news, they have been included in this section rather than among the magazines.]

JACOB BOEHME (1575-1624)

[Although Boehme wrote some 32 works, only one small volume, Weg zu Christo (= (18), (14), (15) in list below), was pbd during his lifetime. His works—which must have been circulated in MS—were tr into English, by John Sparrow, John Ellistone, Humphrey Blunden and Charles and Durand Hotham, and pbd in London between the years 1645-62. Some of his books have rather long titles, and, in the various lists given of them, are not always called by the same name, nor are the same treatises always pbd together, which is confusing. Below is given a complete list of his works in the order in which he wrote them.]

- (1) 1612 The Aurora [unfinished] With Notes added by his own hand, in 1620
- (2) 1619 The Three Principles of the Divine Essence With an Appendix Concerning the Threefold Life of Man (3) 1620 The Threefold Life of Man (4) 1620 Answers to Forty Questions Concerning the Soul, proposed by Dr Balthasar Walter With an Appendix Concerning the Soul and its Image, and of the Turba. Apology in Answer to Gregory Richter [i.e. for the Books of True Repentance and True Resignation] (26) 1624 177 Theosophic Questions, with answers to 13 of them [unfinished] (27) 1624 An Epitome of the Mysterium Magnum (28) 1624 The Holy Week or a Prayer Book [unfinished] (29) 1624 A Table of the Three Principles (30) 1624 A Book of the Last Judgment [lost] (31) 1624 The Clavis (32) 1618-24 Sixty-two Theosophic Epistles (i) 35 Epistles (ii) 25 Epistles (iii) 2 other Epistles (nos 7 and 20 in German edn), one foreficed to The Super-sensual Life (21), the other forms the Preface to the second Apology to B Tylcken (11)]

(a) Collected English Editions

[There is no complete English edn of Boehme's works, although the various trns pbd between 1644-62 make up a complete edn, with several works duplicated. The 4 vols of 1764-81, generally called 'Law's edition,' contain only 17 out of Boehme's 32 works. This edn was not edited by Law, but by his friends George Ward and Thomas Langcake, who pbd it after Law's death, at the cost of Mrs Hutcheson. They rptd it in the main, with some few alterations, from the earlier English edns by Sparrow.]

(5) BURNSIANA

The Scots Musical Museum Vol i Edinburgh, [1787], vol ii, [1788], vol iii, [1790], vol iii, [1792], vol v, [1797], vol vi, [1804] [Burns was supremely interested in this collection of songs, and was virtually the editor of vols ii-v The sixth vol appeared with a re-issue of the work.]

- Burns' Calf Turn'd a Bull 1787
The Calf, The Unco Calf's Answer & the Deil's Answer to his vera worthy frien' Robert Burns [1787]
- Catalogue of Five Hundred Celebrated Authors Now Living 1788 [Has the earliest biographical notice of Burns]
- Grose, Francis The Antiquities of Scotland 2 vols 1789-91, 2 vols 1797 [In his Introduction Grose refers to 'my ingenious friend Mr Robert Burns' and Tam o' Shanter makes its first appearance in print in the second vol.]
- Tait, Alexander Poems and Songs Printed for and sold by the Author only 1790 [No place named on title-page, but was probably ptd in Paisley Contains 'B--rns in his Infancy,' 'B--rns in Lochly,' and other poems The only copy known is in the Mitchell Lib Glasgow]
- Twelve Original Scotch Songs Composed by William Wilson [1792] [This unrecorded volume of Burnsiana has no mention of Burns, but the first 'song' is a portion of his 'Halloween' set to music, and other poems are treated in like fashion]
- The Seasons by James Thomson 1792 [Unrecorded, but has the 'Address to the shade of James Thomson by Mr Burns']
- [Buchan, D S Erskine, Earl of] Essays on the Life and Writings of Fletcher of Saltoun and the Poet Thomson 1792 [Contains the same poem on Thomson as the previous vol., Burns having sent the MS to Buchan It has been claimed that this was its first appearance in print, but the other vol may have preceded it]
- Urban, Peter A Selection of Scots Songs Edinburgh Book 1st, [1793], Book II, [1794], Book 3d, [1799], Vol IV, [1800], Books V and VI in one vol [1804] [The second Book has the first appearance of 'My Love is like a Red, Red Rose']
- Thomson, G A Select Collection of Original Scottish Airs First Set, n d (Preface dated May 1, 1798) [Though Burns contributed many songs to this work, the First Set, forming half of Vol I, was all that was pbd in his lifetime] Second Set, [1798], Third Set, [1799], Fourth Set, [1799], vol III, 1802, vol IV, 1805, vol V, 1818 [The fifth vol included The Jolly Beggars which in later edns was displaced by the next item] Twenty-Five Additional Scottish Airs, 1826 Twenty Scottish Melodies added in 1838-9 to George Thomson's new edn of the Melodies, 1839 Volume Sixth of the Melodies of Scotland, [1841] [This is the first complete tabulation of the first edns of Thomson's Collection As late as 1850 he was still tinkering with it, and his edns and issues are very confusing to collectors]
- A Choice Collection of old Scots Songs, plain and simple without being Italianised in the least—No 1, 2s Watlen [The first number of Watlen's Collection of Scots Songs was thus announced in Scots Mag Sept 1793 It was probably very erratic in its publication for the only copy known, which unfortunately lacks the title-page, has 'A Favourite Dialogue on the Death of Robert Burns,' and seems to have been pbd about 1799]
- The Glasgow Magazine Vol I, 1795 [Unrecorded in previous bibliographies It is excessively rare and only one vol (June to Dec) was pbd Has first appearance of 'A Man's a Man for a' that,' possibly contributed by Burns, for it is headed 'To the Editors of the Glasgow Magazine' It also contains 'O wat ye wha's in yon town,' headed 'For the Glasgow Magazine Song By Robert Burns (Never before Published)']
- Poetry Original and Selected 4 vols Glasgow, [1796-8] [Each vol consists of twenty-four of Brash and Reid's little penny chap-books They abound in Burns interest The first vol has 'Observations on his character and genius' and 'An account of his interment at Dumfries']
- The Polyhymnia, by a Society of Gentlemen Glasgow, [1799] [Has first appearance in print of 'The Bonny Lass of Ballochmyle']
- Liverpool Testimonials to the Departed Genius of Robert Burns [c 1800]
- Miscellanea Perthensis Perth, 1801 (re-issued as The Picnic, London, 1802) [Contains The Jolly Beggars and other poems under the heading 'Poems Ascribed to Robert Burns' but they are obviously culled from Stewart's vol of that title]
- Scot, Elizabeth Alonza and Cora To which are added Letters in Verse by Blacklock and Burns 1801
- Views in North Britain illustrative of the Works of Robert Burns 1805, 1811
- A Collection of Songs revised by the Rev James Pluntre 3 vols 1806-8 [Has anglicised versions (sometimes rather amusing) of 'Honest Poverty' and other songs and poems by Burns]
- Kenney, J H The Burniad 1808 [Contains 'An Epistle from Robert Burns to Miss Gr--ff-n' The piece is not actually by Burns but is supposed to be in his manner]
- Skinner, John Amusements of Leisure Hours, or Poetical Pieces Edinburgh, 1809 [Includes Letters from Burns to the author, and a 'Rhyming Epistle to the Poet,' etc.]

- Skinner, John A Miscellaneous Collection of Fugitive Pieces of Poetry Edinburgh, 1809 [Has the same Burns items as the other vol but it should be noted that an interesting letter which is only mentioned in the preceding work is here ptd in full Skinner's son gives details of his meeting with Burns and describes the person of the poet]
- The Caledonian Musical Museum embellished with a portrait and fac-simile of the handwriting of Burns, and containing upwards of Two Hundred Songs by that immortal Bard The whole edited by his son Vol I, 1809, vol II ('Edited by Mr Robert Burns, son of the Celebrated Robert Burns'), 1810, vol III, 1811 [Gibson's Bibliography, and the Catalogue of the M'Kie Collection of Burnsiana, followed by T F Henderson in the CHEL only list the 1809 vol on the assumption that it completed the work 2nd edn, 1 vol 1820, containing 218 songs, whereas the first vol of the original edn has 225]
- Spence, Elizabeth Isabella Sketches of the Present Manners, Customs, and Scenery of Scotland 2 vols 1811 [Unrecorded though abounding in Burns interest In Appendix of first vol 'Fintry mystay in earthly strife' makes its first appearance in print]
- [Peebles, Wilham] Burnomama The Celebrity of Robert Burns considered Edinburgh, 1811 [Peebles figures in several of Burns's poems]
- A Critique on the Poems of Robert Burns Edinburgh, 1812 [By George Gleig?]
